WINE HOST BIO

Brandon Lapides, Winemaker

Brandon began his winemaking career in 2000, having been accepted into the Fermentation Science program at the University of California at Davis. Immediately following graduation and eager to put his education to work, Brandon spent three months working for Brancott Winery in Marlborough, New Zealand, learning the intricacies and brilliance of Sauvignon Blanc.

Returning to the States, Brandon was offered the assistant winemaker position at Peachy Canyon Winery in Paso Robles, CA. His success at Peachy Canyon brought him to the attention of Dan Goldfield of Dutton Goldfield winery in the Russian River Valley. During his four years at Dutton Goldfield, Brandon mastered cool climate Chardonnay and Pinot Noir, producing complex, balanced, and well-structured wines with profound flavor. His experience producing world-class Chardonnay, Pinot Noir and Zinfandel made Brandon the perfect winemaker for Armida Winery, where he's been making elegant, complex, single-vineyard wines since 2010.

When he isn't at the winery Brandon enjoys cooking meals for his wife and kids. "I really like to ferment at home. From sourdough starters to sauerkraut, I've tried to ferment almost everything," laughs Brandon. Brandon loves Sonoma County for its stunning vineyards, diverse local food, and long-standing winemaking traditions.
